ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Praise to Allah for His guidance throughout the accomplishment of this applied research project report. We are always thankful to Allah for His blessings throughout our academic efforts.

Our deepest appreciation goes to our most compassionate supervisors, Miss Jamhirah Binti Abdullah and Dr Nasreen Miza Hilmy binti Nasrijal for their patience and tolerance in guiding and correcting us towards the completion of this report. Without their deep understanding and consideration, we are unable to complete this report. May Allah bless them always.

We also would like to acknowledge other FSPPP lecturers including Assoc. Prof Mohamad Nor bin Othman, Madam Nurliyana binti Shazali, Miss Nur Hanis binti Mohd Sabri, Sir Fajil bin Abdul Batau for their constructive comments and helpful suggestions during the process in completing this research report. We also wish to extend our gratitude to our supportive friends for their support.

Finally, the greatest respect and love to our parents and families who will always be our pillars for support and encouragement in our academic study.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Introduction

The usage of English language among students is very important. In most universities level, English language is the medium of instruction. English language is a global language and thus it is important to be proficient in order to compete with others in this challenging world.

Despite its importance, there are people who are not proficient in English language. Malaysian students, for example, eventhough they have learnt English for 13 years, 6 years during primary education and 5 years in secondary education, they are still not proficient in that subject. Tan Sri Muhyiddin Yassin who is currently Minister of Education wants this problem to be solved urgently because English is the main language in the world in terms of communication and economy (Ministry of Education, 2012).
