Abstract

The study seeks to achieve three main objectives namely, to determine the students' level of attitudes and motivations towards learning English, to explore the students' views on factors that contribute to their poor performance in MUET Exam and to investigate how Bidayuh students cope with the preparation for the MUET Exam. The study involved Form Six Bidayuh students of SMK Tun Abdul Razak, situated about 40 kilometres from Kuching, the capital city of Sarawak. To assess the students' attitudes and motivations, a questionnaire was adapted from Gardner's Attitude/Motivation Test Battery (AMTB) (Gardner, 1985). The questionnaire is comprised of 104 items representing 12 main domains. The results of the questionnaire were analysed using SPSS for descriptive statistics for mean scores indicated that the students were 'not sure' of their attitudes and motivations, scoring within the 4.00 range. This could explain why the Bidayuh students had poor performance in the MUET Test. Quite contrary however was the results of the interview which indicated that the students were in favour of English and positive towards learning it. The students in the semi-structured interview also revealed that they did not prepare on their own for the MUET Exam and put heavy reliance on the classes only which proved insufficient.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

1.0 Introduction

In Malaysia today, mastery of English is necessary if the younger generation is to compete in an increasingly globalised market and workplace. English literacy is portrayed as instrumental “...to development, internationalisation and globalisation.” (Hazita Azman, 2006, p.105). The government’s decision to re-introduce English as a medium of instruction in 2003 for Science and Maths in the Malaysian school curriculum reflected the government’s serious effort at ensuring that the newer younger generation would be competitive with a sound knowledge of English. English is viewed as the as the language widely used for businesses and research involving science and technology (Tan, 2005, p.56). The then Minister of Education, Musa Mohamad, strongly acknowledged the instrumental function of English which needs to be mastered in order for speakers to be able to communicate and build networks with foreigners (Tan, 2005). There were strong suggestions that there was a need to revive the glory of English or reclaim English. It was proposed by the Education Ministry’s director-general, Datuk Abdul Rafie Mahat, that it is the responsibility of the teachers to take initiatives and make great effort in bringing back the success of language programmes that help improve the competency level in English. The director-general went on to state that teachers should welcome the effort to bring back English into the Malaysian education system as the instructional medium in schools (Tan, 2005). Therefore, English in the 21st century reclaims its importance in Malaysia as the second language, a language for globalisation and the Digital Age, with the instrumental function of enabling Malaysia to attain an industrialised country in the near future (Hazita Azman, 2006). Nonetheless, as much as English is viewed as one of the instrumental tools in
