ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

“In the name of God, the Most Gracious and Most Merciful”

To begin, I would like express my deepest gratitude to Allah the Almighty for given me the strength, knowledge and good health to go through such a strenuous journey in completing my dissertation which was profoundly gratifying. Without Allah’s guidance and permission, nothing could have ever been achieved with ease.

I also have great respect and appreciation for my supervisor, Associate Professor Doctor Izaham Shah Bin Ismail who guided me with patience, offered great amount of valuable input and advice on multiple topics, and allotted his time generously for these to happen to support the completion of my dissertation. His efforts help make this study becoming a possible task. My gratitude also goes to all my lectures at Universiti Teknologi MARA, Shah Alam who educated me throughout my studies.

I would also like to thank my family particularly my mother, Mariam Binti Jahidin for the prayers and undivided encouragements that have made me a stronger person for this journey. My appreciation also goes to my siblings Muhd. Izwan Ramli, Nazatul Ritha Zakaria, Nur Hana Marlili Ramli and Muhd Sharwani for their continuous support and offered their helping hands whenever I needed them the most.

Last but not least, my sincere thanks goes to the Faculty of Education for the support, respondents who were willing to assist as well as friends, classmates and colleagues for their moral support in making this dissertation a reality.

ABSTRACT

Conflicts in writing among second language learners have driven many researchers to conduct studies to explore this field. This study is to investigate deeply on the use of blog to facilitate the development in writing among ESL tertiary-level learners in Malaysia. Twenty Malay ESL tertiary-level learners enrolled in English for Academic Purposes (BEL311) at Universiti Teknologi MARA Perak, Seri Iskandar campus are selected as subject for this investigation. The researcher employs both qualitative and quantitative approaches which involved questionnaires, observations on learners' blogs and interview. Questionnaires were analyzed using descriptive and inferential statistics. The finding of this study indicated that there was an increment in learners' overall development in writing after they involved in blogging activities for fourteen weeks. In general, the study revealed that, rather than improving learners' development in writing; it contributed more towards the improvement in learners' writing skill.

ABSTRAK

Konflik dalam penulisan bahasa kedua (Bahasa Inggeris) telah menyebabkan pelbagai penyelidikan di jalankan bagi mencari jalan penyelesaiannya. Kajian ini adalah bertujuan untuk mengkaji dengan lebih mendalam tentang penggunaan blog bagi membantu pelajar-pelajar pendidikan tahap ketiga untuk dalam memahami proses-proses penulisan bahasa kedua. Responden yang terlibat adalah 20 pelajar berbangsa Melayu yang mengambil kursus Bahasa Inggeris untuk Penulisan Akademik (BEL311) di Universiti Teknologi MARA Perak, cawangan Seri Iskandar. Data kajian diperolehi melalui soal selidik, pemerhatian terhadap blog responden dan juga temubual. Data telah di analisa menggunakan statistik deskripsi dan inferensi. Dapatan kajian menunjukkan terdapat peningkatan terhadap kesedaran responden untuk mengaplikasi proses-proses penulisan selepas menulis dalam blog. Secara keseluruhan, kajian menunjukkan penggunaan blog lebih menyumbang kepada peningkatan dalam kemahiran penulisan berbanding kesedaran mengenai proses-proses penulisan.
