ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the name of God, the Compassionate,
the Merciful, Praise be to God,
the Lord of the Universe and may the Blessing
And Peace of God be upon His messenger

Of first importance, is our thank to God, our constant Guide, who has shown us that even in moments of despair, faith and efforts will prevail over any hardships thrown our way.

So many people helped us in the completion of this research that it would be impossible to adequately thank them all.

To our supervisor, Cik Mazlina Mahali for her great care and consideration, who meticulously went through the painstaking job of reviewing the drafts of our research, and who turned our incoherent ideas into clear, legible intellectual thoughts which is presented in this paper.

Our sincerest appreciation to Puan Rohani Mohd Shah, our previous supervisor for giving us continuous encouragement and support, who had to leave us before completion of the research; we wish her well for her industrial training.

A huge appreciation to Puan Su'aida binti Haji Safei, who overwhelmed us with her understanding. Without her sharp but otherwise pinpoint criticisms, this research would not have even taken place.

We would like to also acknowledge the insightful comments of the following people on the drafts made throughout the conclusion of our research:

- a) Matthew Heaphy, Deputy Convener and US-UN Regional Coordinator of America's Coalition for the International Criminal Court
- b) Alicia Days, Francesca Varda and Maria Pareja Rodriguez from the Coalition of the International Criminal Court (CICC)

ABSTRACT

This research analyses the reasons for failed prosecutions of war crimes with regards to international humanitarian law. The first chapter goes into the essence and structure of the research, and all the necessary conceptual features are introduced to ensure readers' understanding. The second chapter goes into the structure of the system of modern war crimes prosecutions, where the researchers also introduced the institutions responsible for prosecuting war crimes. The third chapter goes into a description of modern war crimes prosecution, where the researchers made mention of flaws surrounding the trials. The fourth chapter then focused on an analysis of the inherent problems preventing successful prosecutions of war crimes perpetrators. Our research concludes with a consideration of whether the current system is a flawed but workable system or should be done away with altogether, and has made several recommendations to improve the current system.
