ABSTRACT

This study reports on the usefulness of MAIS and the availability of information to the operation managers in the manufacturing sectors. The study will categorize the information into four dimensions that are scope, timeliness, aggregation and integration. It is adopted from an earlier research carried out by Chenhall and Morris. Survey for the study has been conducted in the state of Johore involving three regions namely Segamat, Tangkak and Muar. The relationship between the availability of information to managers and how they make use of such information is very important for decision-making process especially for those in managerial and financial levels. The results for the study indicate that managers perceived all four dimensions information to be useful to them. On the contrary, the study indicates that the availability of information is not considered as an important factor in helping them to make better decisions. The finding further indicates that there is no significant relationship between the availability of information and how managers make use of them.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I praised God the Almighty for giving me His blessings to complete this dissertation despite many hardships that I had to face in order to finish it.

I would like to express utmost gratitude especially the following individuals:

Associate Professor Puan Khasi’ah Binti Yusof, my supervisor, for lending her expertise and spending time with me on this project;

To Associate Professor Encik Zin Bin Muhammad for assisting me on my data analysis process;

My husband, Wahid Abu Bakar and my son, Muhammad Hafiz Wahid for being patience and understanding.

My mom, Asmah Binti Hussin for her constant prayers and my brothers Azhar, Aizul and Azrin for their support to make my dream comes true
