ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

All praise to The Almighty for giving us the opportunity to embark on our Bachelor and for completing this long and challenging project successfully.

Next, a huge appreciation we bid to our lecturer in this Undergraduate Project course (HTM655) Mrs. Jazira Binti Anuar @ Mohd Noor for her providing the knowledge, assistance and also support to us in making this study. Our big gratitude goes to our incredible supervisor Mr. Rahman Bin Abdullah for his guidance and ideas throughout this journey.

Special thanks to our colleagues and friends for helping us complete this project. Finally, this project is dedicated to our family members who are always there beside us, building a strong support and clear vision in order to help us complete this study.

ABSTRACT

Food wastage is a serious issue that occurs at all stages of the cycle, starting from the moment it develops until to the moment it reaches the user. As the population of the world increases, the amount of food waste is also cataclysmic. Lack of awareness about the effect of food wastage is causing young adults to waste more food. Young adults between these ages are mostly students. There are some students that need to consider their deal of information about food waste. This study aims to identify the perception, determine the understanding and identify the awareness of food waste effect among Foodservice Management undergraduates in UiTM Terengganu on managing food wastage. This study was conducted among 153 respondents from Foodservice Management undergraduates in UiTM Terengganu by online questionnaires. The data analysis had been made by using SPSS. As the study shows that most Foodservice Management undergraduates are aware of the issues of food waste, it is crucial that the interpretation of this matter needs to be encouraged not just in schools or universities, but also to the public. With the public getting involved, the issues of food waste can be minimized throughout the time in positive ways.
