ABSTRACT

This report explains my industrial training in the Software Development Department at Millennium Radius Sdn Bhd. I focused on software testing throughout my internship, learning how to create and run test cases, find flaws in software, and ensure quality control across all applications. I gained practical experience with testing processes and the software development lifecycle while working on both admin and mobile platforms. My technical skills improved during the internship, especially in creating test scripts and fixing problems. Collaborating with developers and other interns also helped me to build soft skills like effective communication, teamwork, and time management. I gained an improved understanding of software testing and its importance in producing high-quality programs overall, and the training helped me become ready for future positions in software development and testing.
