I have had pets for as long as I can remember. All ups and down, the good and the bad was a worthwhile experience. Let me tell you about my cats, Jacq and Loki. Jacq is six years old Kinkalow. Kinkalow is a curly-eared munchkin. I have him before I have my biological son, Nuh Irfan. So, basically Jacq is also my son, my sweetheart, and my everything. Jacq's son is Loki. He is four years old. Loki was originally terrified of people and would not be petted, even by me. What is the reason for this? Because he is the same age as my son Nuh Irfan. I was preoccupied with becoming a first-time mother when he was born. It was difficult for me, and I did not give Loki (Jacq's son) enough attention. As a result, Loki becomes an unhappy cat due to his lack of affection. However, as time passes, he learns to trust and is now a lot better with people. My daily routine consists of cleaning their room, sweeping and mopping the floor, scooping their waste, and brushing their hair. It is very unfortunate that I do not have a lot of leisure time to play with them because Nuh Irfan craves more attention. So, I choose to get them automatic cat toys so that they can amuse themselves. Anyway, I will let them out of their room occasionally, and they are free to roam the house. They have never left the house. I do not think they will be able to survive outside, therefore we take precautions to ensure there are no openings to get outside the house to avoid an unexpected situation. They are intended to be house cats. Because Loki is a non-standard Kinkalow, he is taller than his father, Jacq (he did not inherit the short legs from Jacq). Kinkalows are a loving breed that enjoys being petted. Having a cat is a great way to relieve stress. I encourage everyone to try cat stress therapy and have personal experience with it. When it comes to the expense of owning a cat, the first outlay is high since we must prepare the cage, litter box, grooming products, cat tree, toys, and some necessities. However, those items can be used for a very long time, and we need to purchase them just once. So, their food and cat litter are the only things that need to be maintained on a monthly basis. As a result, it is not excessively expensive to own a cat. You will, however, must pay additionally if you wish to take them to a pet shop for grooming. Aside from that, cats should be vaccinated three times after they turn three months old, and later vaccinated only once a year to avoid catching deadly virus. I am really pleased with my decision to have cats as pet because they provide excellent stress relief. Their purring sound is a miracle since it makes us feel joyful just listening to it. Do believe me when I say that you can benefit from this organic stress-relieving method. Please try, you would not regret it.
