Plagiarism is a mistake that often exists in learning, processing ideas, and writing. Plagiarism is an offense by an irresponsible party in presenting the ideas or works of others or the author as his own ideas to find an easy way to solve the management and get praise for the work of others. It becomes more serious when other people's works or ideas are taken without obtaining permission and confirmation and also without crediting the real author. In addition, irresponsible parties take advantage of obtaining manuscripts, printed, electronic materials, or unpublished materials as their main idea and publish them without the permission of the real author. This act of plagiarism occurs intentionally or recklessly or unintentionally based on their purpose to gain an advantage by taking the work of others. Nevertheless, the perpetrators of this plagiarism will be detected or tracked to ensure that these perpetrators are subject to disciplinary action to protect the true works of the author. Furthermore, in an academic perspective, from an academic perspective, integrity is because there are students who take carelessly or learn knowledge. A student should have the principle of intellectual trust by processing their ideas based on their own knowledge and understanding so that they do not owe a debt to the processors of ideas, data, and knowledge that form the basis of their own work. At the same time, plagiarism that often occurs among these students will reflect on themselves as weak students and fail in the search for knowledge. As a result, the future of students will not be guaranteed because the knowledge they learn is useless and affects the career of students who want to be successful by taking other people's work without doing any permission and tolerance to helping real writers in expanding their ideas in a way more integrity.
