Foreword

It gives me great pleasure to present Voice of the Soul Volume VI: Down the Memory Lane – My Ramadhan and Syawal Stories, a poetry anthology that beautifully captures the spiritual, emotional, and cultural significance of Ramadhan and Syawal. This publication is more than a collection of poems. It is a meaningful platform for writers to express their reflections, memories, and personal journeys through the art of poetry. The themes explored in this volume highlights spirituality, family, tradition, gratitude, forgiveness, and personal growth which are values that continue to shape individuals and strengthen communities.

Ramadhan teaches us patience, sincerity, compassion, and self-discipline, while Syawal reminds us of forgiveness, reunion, gratitude, and joy. Through the poems in this anthology, readers are invited to revisit these meaningful experiences and appreciate the moments that connect us to our faith, families, and cultural heritage.

I would like to congratulate the organizing committee, editorial team, contributors, and everyone involved in making this publication a reality. Your dedication to nurturing creativity and preserving meaningful narratives is highly commendable.

May Voice of the Soul Volume VI inspire readers to value their memories, reflect on their spiritual journeys, and continue expressing themselves through the beauty of language and literature.

Foreword

It is with great pride and appreciation that I welcome the publication of Voice of the Soul Volume VI: Down the Memory Lane – My Ramadhan and Syawal Stories. This anthology reflects the creativity, sincerity, and thoughtful expression of writers who have transformed their personal experiences into poetry.

Poetry has a unique ability to preserve feelings and memories in ways that ordinary words sometimes cannot. In this collection, the experiences of Ramadhan and Syawal are expressed through heartfelt lines that speak of faith, family, traditions, sacrifice, hope, and renewal. These poems remind us that every memory carries a lesson, and every story has the power to connect people across backgrounds and generations.

This volume also represents our continued effort to encourage creative writing, literary appreciation, and meaningful self-expression. It provides contributors with a valuable opportunity to share their voices while also contributing to a publication that celebrates culture, spirituality, and human connection.

I would like to extend my sincere congratulations to the editorial team, organizing committee, and all contributors for their commitment and hard work. Your efforts have resulted in a publication that is not only creative and reflective, but also meaningful and inspiring.

May this anthology continue to encourage more writers to express their thoughts, preserve their memories, and share their stories with the world.

Preface

Voice of the Soul Volume VI: Down the Memory Lane – My Ramadhan and Syawal Stories is a heartfelt collection of poetic reflections that celebrates the beauty, meaning, and memories surrounding two deeply significant occasions: Ramadhan and Syawal.

This anthology brings together voices that speak of devotion, gratitude, family, culture, forgiveness, renewal, and personal growth. Through poetry, the contributors revisit moments of quiet reflection, spiritual awakening, cherished traditions, and joyful togetherness. Each poem serves as a window into lived experiences, reminding us that Ramadhan and Syawal are not merely seasons in the calendar, but meaningful journeys of the heart and soul.

The title Down the Memory Lane reflects the intention of this volume: to preserve memories that are personal yet universal. The poems in this collection capture stories that many readers may recognize in their own lives such as the warmth of family gatherings, the serenity of prayers, the lessons of patience, the spirit of giving, and the joy of reunion after sacrifice.

As Volume VI of Voice of the Soul, this publication continues the tradition of encouraging creative expression and nurturing literary appreciation among writers. It is our hope that this anthology will inspire readers to reflect on their own experiences, appreciate the richness of cultural and spiritual traditions, and recognize poetry as a meaningful medium for preserving stories across generations.

May this collection touch hearts, awaken memories, and give voice to the many emotions that make Ramadhan and Syawal truly special.

Acknowledgement

The publication of Voice of the Soul Volume VI: Down the Memory Lane – My Ramadhan and Syawal Stories would not have been possible without the dedication, support, and encouragement of many individuals and parties.

First and foremost, we express our deepest gratitude to the Rector, Dr Mahazir Ismail for the continuous support, guidance, and encouragement in promoting literary and creative initiatives. Our sincere appreciation also goes to the Head of Department, Puan Robekhah Harun for the motivation and commitment shown throughout the preparation of this anthology.

We would also like to extend our heartfelt thanks to all committee members, editors, coordinators, reviewers, and contributors who worked diligently to bring this publication to completion. Their commitment, creativity, and cooperation have played an important role in ensuring the success of this project.

Special appreciation is extended to all poets and contributors who generously shared their thoughts, memories, and personal experiences through poetry. Each submission has added depth, beauty, and meaning to this anthology, making it a rich collection of voices inspired by Ramadhan and Syawal.

Finally, we thank everyone who has supported this publication directly or indirectly. May this anthology serve as a lasting reminder of the values of reflection, gratitude, unity, and togetherness that Ramadhan and Syawal continue to inspire.

Chapter 1

A Home Rewritten in Two Heartbeats

Nor Elyzatul Akma Hamdan, RPh

For two Ramadhans,
home lived only in fragments
in glass jars of kuih raya I could not reach,
in a distant, the rise of takbir
that trembled somewhere beyond me.
Syawal arrived before,
soft as it was fleeting, joy worn gently,
like a garment not yet fully mine.
But this year, time turned differently.
This Ramadhan returned me
not merely to a place,
but to a state of being
I had been praying to remember.
And this time,
I returned with more than myself.
In my arms, two heartbeats,
my twin sons, small constellations of amanah,
anchoring me between night feeds and whispered supplications,
where exhaustion softened into devotion,
and love unfolded in its most unguarded form.
Beside me, my husband
once my companion in passing seasons
now the steady presence
in a life we are learning to build together,
through quiet strength,
through unspoken understanding,
through a love that has deepened into something enduring.
Ramadhan, this time,
felt like restoration
not sudden, but deliberate,
as though the soul was being gathered piece by piece.
As a pharmacy lecturer,
I speak of the precision of guiding others toward healing that can be measured and understood.
Yet life, in its quiet wisdom, has taught me
not all restoration yields to knowledge;
some healing escapes the language of science,
revealing itself instead
in presence, in faith,
in the sacred act of holding and being held.
And when Syawal arrived with the sky trembling in takbir,
with doors opening to forgiveness
I no longer searched for meaning.
I was already within it.
This Raya was not found
in grandeur or perfection,
but in fleeting sanctuaries of love:
two babies' breath against my skin,
a glance that needed no words,
a family no longer separated
by distance or time.
For the first time in years,
home was not a place I longed for
it was a life unfolding gently
within my embrace.
And in that stillness,
I understood
some homecomings are not arrivals,
but quiet awakenings of the soul.
