ABSTRACT

This research is about the law governing domestic violence in Malaysia and India. Reference and comparison are made between the relevant laws in both countries. The relevant law that been referred to were the Domestic Violence Act 1994, The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act 2005, the Indian Penal Code and Malaysian Penal Code. Cases were also been referred to illustrate the effectiveness of the law.

Chapter one will introduce the concept of domestic violence, while, chapter two is the literature review. Chapter three and chapter four are chapters on the relevant law governing the domestic violence in India and Malaysia. Next, chapter five which stating the findings based on the legal chapters. Last but not least is chapter six which is the final chapter that states some recommendations on how to improve the law.

This research project is set out to examine the protection provided to the victims and also the punishment imposed on the offenders of domestic violence in both countries. From this research there are some loopholes found in our law with regard this matter. Therefore some suggestions and recommendation has been made in order to make our law more effective or "the teeth that can bite".

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the name of Allah, most gracious, and most merciful.

First and foremost, we would like to take this opportunity to state our appreciation to our beloved supervisor, Cik Norliza Abdul Hamid, for her patience and willingness to help us go through all the process and rough journey in preparing this project paper.

This research project has been carried out by a team which has included Isabilla Najah Zaini, Mariani Zainuddin, Nur Amalina Bunyamin and Siti Fariza Faris. All of us have done the research and gained as much information as we could.

My contribution (Isabilla Najah) is in preparing the introduction, literature review and also the final editing.

My contribution (Mariani Zainuddin) is preparing the legal chapter based on domestic violence act of India and Malaysia and its findings as well as the literature review and also the final editing.

My contribution (Siti Fariza) is preparing the legal chapter based penal code of Malaysia and India and also its findings as well as the literature review.

My contribution (Nur Amalina Bunyamin) is in preparing the recommendations based on the findings and also gathering cases for suggestion purposes.

Then, we also would like to thank our parents in giving financial and moral support to us. Preparing this project paper is quite a tough job for us since this is our first experience in dealing with a critical study and a research project.
