The past decades have witnessed many lifestyle trends and changes in terms of fitness, trendy drinks, hobbies and house décor. Landscape too has become increasingly recognised as a topic of central importance in most households. Many started to show appreciation of landscapes as it represents certain values to them. There are various types of landscape such as natural-looking landscape (artificial grass), a neat landscape, or a landscape with soil conservation practices.

Personally, landscape carries the value of family, tranquillity or relaxation for me. I could fully utilise my garden for so many things. We could enjoy the greenery while doing family activities there. Imagine having a family portrait during the morning of the Eid, or having a barbeque gathering at the yard at night. Oh it won't be dark since we can install light poles to lighten up the area! My nephews and nieces would enjoy running, falling, crawling and rolling on the grass. Having a neat garden is definitely important for the kids' safety.

On another level, house owners started to install mini golf areas in their backyard. Basically, human-modified landscapes exhibit varying patterns and functions to suit the house owner's lifestyle.

Creating an impactful outdoor area can definitely affect one's life and mood. You must know that you can design a great landscape without breaking your bank! You just have to find the right landscapers who can suggest the appropriate design and materials to uplift your home. You must know that landscape can increase the value of your property too! So, other than for personal satisfaction, landscaping is beneficial for long-term investment as it significantly adds to your home's value.
