ABSTRACT

The study was conducted to examine the financial management awareness among final year students. This study was conducted at the faculty of ACIS, UiTM Shah Alam. It involves final year students ie semester 6 and 7. A total of 50 org respondents are chosen at random. This study was descriptive using questionnaire as instrument of study. The questionnaire was conducted with five sections where part A was about respondent's background. Part B, C, D, E, and F contain 37 items related to research questions. The data obtained were analyzed using SPSS output. The results show that most students' source of income comes from study loans. The study also found that many of the final year students are acquainted with what the investment is. The study also concludes that, among the biggest problems faced by the final year students are their short-run concern on how they spend their money. Therefore, besides suggesting that the students themselves to improve their skills in managing finances, other parties should also be together to ensure that the country's assets have a high level of financial management.
