TITLE : The Influence of Personal Hobby on Personality of Nursing Students in UiTM Sarawak

1.0 INTRODUCTION

Hobbies are practiced for interest and enjoyment, rather than financial reward. Examples include collecting, creative, and artistic pursuits, making, tinkering, sports and adult education. Engaging in a hobby can lead to acquiring substantial skill, knowledge and experience. However, personal fulfillment is the aim. What are hobbies for some people are professions for others: a chef may enjoy cooking as a hobby, while a professional game tester might enjoy playing computer games. Generally speaking, the person who does something for fun, not remuneration, is called an amateur, as a distinct from a professional.

2.1 LITERATURE REVIEW

Types of hobbies

Collecting

The hobby of collecting consists of acquiring specific items based on a particular interest of the collector. These collections of things are often highly organized, carefully cataloged, and attractively displayed. Since collecting depends on the interests of the individual collector, it may deal with almost any subject. The depth and breadth of the collection may also vary. Some collectors choose to focus on a specific subtopic within their area of general interest: for example, 19th Century postage stamps, milk bottle labels from Sussex, or Mongolian harnesses and tack. Others prefer to keep a more general collection, accumulating Star Trek merchandise, or stamps from all countries of the world. Some collections are capable of being completed, at least to the extent of owning one sample of each possible item in the collection (e.g. a copy of every book by Agatha Christie). Collectors who specifically try to assemble complete collections in this way are sometimes called "completists." Upon completing a particular collection, they may stop collecting, expand the collection to include related items, or begin an entirely new collection. The most popular fields in collecting have specialized commercial dealers that trade in the items being collected, as well as related accessories. Many of these dealers started as collectors themselves, and then turned their hobby into a profession.

3.0 RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

The design of the study is including the qualitative and quantitative method. Beside that, this study also using some other method and approaches that suitable for this study. Influence by the order in getting relevant information which suitable with the method that we have been decide to use. Moreover, this can help in preventing problems while collecting data or information which can be an irrelevant and invalid data or information. Through the suitable method in finding data, it can give more efficient and complete data. In this chapter also will be stated the type of survey, sampling method, proposed test and analysis, and the questionnaire design.
