ABSTRACT

Providing aid to people who in need help is never enough. Volunteer must meet their most urgent needs and be the grounded science. Aid agencies have a responsibility to determine the effectiveness of their response and use evidence based approaches. The tragedies of the past decade have led to an identity crisis among humanitarians. With the end of the cold war, both concepts and the practices of humanitarian action have expressively transformed. In the era of globalization, humanitarian aid should be more effective and prompt action should be taken in order to save refugees life all over the world. There are always issues and challenges in supporting humanitarian aid for refugee. Besides that, NGO, government and society itself, play an important role in order to ensure the refugee especially the children can be assisted in an appropriate manner in term of the humanitarian aid. Besides, each one of us should also have the humanity kind of feeling and should try to put ourselves in refugee shoes. They never wanted their life to be as tough as what they went through right now. They just need our sympathy to help them to have a better life. Refugee never asks for more instead they will be thankful if our society can lead them to a brighter future. Most of the refugee parents worried more about their children as they wanted their children to have a better future and they are willing to sacrifice themselves in order for their children to have better education even though they are carrying the refugee status. The status as a refugee has somehow made it hard for some of the refugee to get the right as a person. They are hardly getting a proper job and have medical bills to pay in fact it is higher. It could not be denied that there is humanitarian aid served to them, but it's not adequate enough. Some humanitarian aid only came in once a year and it is only during the fasting month, and for the rest of eleven months in a year, they have to survive by their own. They are many kind donors that are willing to help the refugee, but sometimes they did not have any idea or they did not know which channel they should go to. With the help of dedicative NGO, government and public donor, humanitarian aid in Malaysia should concerned more on refugee children in order to achieve new paradigm. As we all knew, children is a vulnerable group and in need of more attention from an adult like us. There are myriad ways we as a society can do to ensure the child development and survival are taken care of such as the Suka Amal agency if we want to do good to the refugee. Suka Amal activities can be found on Facebook and from there we can participate in humanitarian aid for the refugee in Malaysia. Supports are not only by the financial wise, but we can also be a volunteer at their place. The shelter of Madrasah Rohingya, Klang is an example of it. There will be a teacher that comes every weekend to teach English to the Rohingya student. In the nutshell, there are so many ways for us as a responsible society can do in order to help other people especially Rohingya refugee children. By this research, it is hope that it can create awareness to everyone that refugee especially the children should receive enough love and care and they are in need of better protections in order to be a better person in the future.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Alhamdulillah, I thank the Almighty Allah SWT for giving me this opportunity by easing my task in order to conduct this powerful yet meaningful research for me. No words can describe how happy I am when my research has been accepted and approved by my beloved supervisor Dr. Yarina. She always there for me whenever I needed her helps and advises. She made things easier for me. From the bottom of my heart, I am so grateful to have Dr. Yarina as my supervisor. Without you, I won't be able to complete this dissertation on time. Thank you for always sacrifices your time in order to ensure that I am on a right track! You are one of the reasons that made me to be so dedicated in doing this research. Your positive attitudes inspired me more to be a better person from time to time. Thank you once again for what you have done to me.

Furthermore, I would like to thank my friend, Chew Eng Peng that helped me dealing with the right and responsible non-governmental organization (NGO). Without you, I would not be able to find the right agency. An NGO, by the name of Suka Amal is managed by a strong young lady, Puan Noor Hajja Binti Abdullah, who loves to do charity works. She was someone that very easy and comfortable to deal with. Before we met for the first time, she had been really helpful, even during the conversation through the phone. Other than that, special thanks to Ustaz Abdullah, who is one of the educators at the Madrasah Rohingya Klang. He was the one that selected the students for me in doing this research. He was also the one that responsible to gathered the Rohingya parents for me in order to ease my interview. His good will to fetch the parents and then sent to the Madrasah to meet me there. Thank you Ustaz!

On the other hand, I would like to thank Prof. Rozalli Hashim, who helped me for the research at the proposal stage. He had been really helpful and it was fun to be in your class. Your jokes will never be forgotten!

Last but not least, thank you to my beloved family. I am grateful to have a very supportive family who always been my backbones. They would be there when I need a shoulder to lean on. Thank you to my father, Encik Abu and I would always know that my late mother would be happy to watch me from heaven. Thank you to my siblings too who always encourage me to do goods in life. Finally, special gratitude to me as I am successful went through the Master program in Universiti Teknologi Mara (UiTM).

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION

1.1 RESEARCH BACKGROUND

The word of humanitarian aid or humanitarian relief can be classified as noble job or services that have been offered by humanitarian agencies, private organization, corporation, individual and any stakeholders. Nowadays, we can see that the service has been growing massively. There are various services that have been offered in this humanitarian aid such as by helping the people who were in trouble like the victims of the natural disasters. Humanitarian aid also consists of services by providing foods and medical. Crossman (2014) stated that the exploration of humanitarian aid has existed since the 1980s and 1990s and has been recognized to play an important and amazing role in politics world. The most international and long lasting in the arena of providing a humanitarian relief is United Nation High Commissioner Right (UNHCR). A lot of humanitarian aid services and missions have been delivered by the UNHCR where they are also known as an international agency of humanitarian aid.

Humanitarian issues whether it is caused by the natural disaster or man- made, required a prompt and effective response from the International government or other agencies. The sake of children conditions normally will be one of the most serious emergencies because they are underneath the category of the most vulnerable and required a lot of attentions not only from the local government but also the international organization. Many studies have done a research toward humanitarian aid around the world, but very little that has focused specifically to the children. European Union (EU) plays an important role as a global actor when it comes to humanitarian assistance (Vadura and Taylor, 2010). Red Cross has reported that children are among the weakest, smallest, and the most dependent population in emergencies.

Children have been identified as the most unprotected in time of crises or issues. The European Union has decided that children are the most top priority in the
