

Abstract

This report offers a thorough summary of the Industrial Training program I finished following the fourth semester's final examinations. I had the chance to obtain real-world, hands-on experience during the eight-week (about two-month) program, which was conducted over the semester break. In Balai Felde, Bangunan Balai Felde, Jalan Gurney 1, Kampung Datuk Keramat, 54000 Kuala Lumpur, Federal Territory of Kuala Lumpur, I performed this seminar at Felde Investment Corporation Sdn. Bhd. (FIC), a renowned institution.

A required part of the Information Management curriculum, the Industrial Training program aims to close the knowledge gap between classroom instruction and practical work experience. It gives students the chance to learn skills that are essential for success in the industry and apply the academic information they have learned during the course in a real-world work environment. Through my training, I was able to learn a lot about data handling practices, working with information systems, and taking part in organizational initiatives, among other areas of information management in a corporate setting.

During the eight weeks, I worked on a project that aided in the development of my technical and soft skills, including communication, problem-solving, and cooperation. Along with exposing me to the demands and obligations of a professional environment, the experience improved my capacity for both solo and group work. I had a better grasp of the information management area after the program, and I could apply the ideas I had learned in the classroom to actual situations, which made it a crucial component of both my academic and professional growth.
