Abstract

The covid-19 pandemic has hit the country since the beginning of 2020 and has made Malaysians progressively tech-savvy in living a new normal life. Exposure to the new norms has opened up the space and opportunities for Perpustakaan Sultanah Bahiyah to offer reference services to the maximum level proactively. The closure of library operations during the Movement Control Order (MCO) has impacted all users because most library services are in physical access. Therefore, exploring technology in digital information marketing has become an initiative to increase information literacy. The adaptation of information technology aims to increase the visibility of the reference services by developing a one-stop platform known as UUM In4Share to find library-curated, authoritative scholarly resources and other useful information for students, academicians, researchers and communities. This platform is a starting point for anyone who needs help by utilizing scholarly resources and connecting with the librarians who can provide further assistance. In addition, it focuses on the technical preparation and configuration of the platform development. The implementation of In4Share has increased the usage statistics of electronic resources effectively and efficiently. The platform has played an essential role in connecting users to support teaching, learning and academic research activities. At the same time, the competencies of the librarians who act as liaison officers in terms of technology, communication and creativity are seen to be increasing and relevant to the development of knowledge sharing.

Novelty and Uniqueness

The platform provides information and knowledge resource access to support academic works freely.

Benefit to Mankind

Support the development of teaching, learning and research by providing the relevant information and knowledge in various formats.

Potential Commercialization

Other academic institutions could share and adapt it to develop a knowledge society in Malaysia.
