

UNIVERSITI TEKNOLOGI MARA

THE INFLUENCE OF SERVICE DELIVERY FAILURES, SERVICE
RECOVERY AND PERCEIVED
VALUES ON CUSTOMER
BEHAVIOURAL INTENTIONS IN MALAY RESTAURANTS

ZULHAN BIN OTHMAN

Thesis submitted in fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy

Faculty of Hotel and Tourism Management

February 2015

ABSTRACT

Undeniable in restaurant operation service delivery failures occurred when service delivery performance does not meet the expectations of customers and classified as either pertaining to the outcome or process. A process failure happened when core service carried in a flawed or incomplete way, resulting in poor benefit and instigating in reduction of economic resources such as money, time, status or esteem to the customer. Knowing failures will occur even in the finest restaurant, it is imperative therefore for the restaurant to make provisions for recovery of these unfavourable instances and the provisions that restaurant makes are known as service recovery. Restaurant ability to recover from service delivery failure is an essential element of the whole service delivery system with significant implications as it is recognized to provide opportunities to decrease costs, improve customer experience and increase customer satisfaction. The effective service recovery not only corrects the service delivery failures, but also builds and maintains strong relationships which ultimately lead to behavioural intentions, including revisiting and word of mouth. In contrary, as to why customers are found of still patronizing some of the restaurants despite providing fewer recovery processes. It is therefore conjectured that the role of positive perceived values may influence customers repeat purchase behaviour or the underlying reasons that cause this causation. This study empirically investigates the causal relationship among service delivery failures, service recovery and perceived values with satisfaction and behavioural intentions of customers towards Malay medium restaurants. A mixed method of qualitative and quantitative investigation through interview with selected restaurant operators and questionnaire survey among the restaurant customers was opted. Through interview with 18 restaurant operators, occurrence of service delivery failures and service recovery as well perceived values in Malay medium restaurants as central issue of this study were identified. The quantitative approach in this study structured through survey questionnaire with customers who had visited and experienced service delivery failures when dining at pre-identified Malay restaurants in Klang Valley. With 481 respondents, the data analyses were conducted by a process of multivariate analysis using structural equation modelling (SEM) via AMOS (Analysis of Moment Structures). Exploratory factor analysis (EFA) and confirmatory factor analysis (CFA) were initially performed to validate the scales. Five dimensions of the overall measurement model were generated and tested in compliance with stringent purification process for the models. The results of structural modelling provide evidence that three dimensions of service delivery failures, service recovery and behavioural intentions were significantly related and the relationship between service recovery and customer satisfaction were not significantly related. However, the strength of the relationship between service delivery failures and customer satisfaction would be altered by the presence of perceived value. In other word, perceived value mediates the relationship between service delivery failure and customer satisfaction. With this finding, the restaurant operators should not therefore ignore or being ignorant on the perceived value, but highly conversant with it as those elements could be used in retaining the customers despite having a slight service failure and slacking in service recovery.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I thank you God for giving me the strength, blessing, perseverance and good health which enabled me to complete this study. This research would not have been started, nor completed without the encouragement and support of many wonderful people.

There are several individuals who have played such an integral part in assisting me throughout the doctoral program and ultimately, the completion of this thesis. My sincere appreciation goes to my main supervisor, Assoc. Prof. Dr. Mohd Salehuddin Mohd Zahari for his intellectual support, constructive ideas, guidance, patience and ungrudging generosity with time throughout the whole journey. He truly exemplifies what it means to be a “mentor” and has successfully guided me even through some stressful times as well as sharpening my understanding of a thesis and academic writing. It was a great privilege to work under his supervision, professionalism and expertise which led me to be more focused in my thoughts and ideas. Similarly, thanks are due to Assoc. Prof. Dr. Salleh Mohd Radzi my second supervisor for his advice, valuable insights, comments, ideas, and suggestions in the course of improving this thesis. He has served as my “cheerleader”, advocate and source of constant positivism during some otherwise trying time. Without his enthusiasm and support, my determination would not have been as infallible.

It would have been so very difficult to complete the doctoral program without the encouragement and support of family. I am very grateful for the sacrifices endured, and the patience and tolerance shown, by my wife, Wan Wahida, as I progressed through the graduate program. Special heartfelt acknowledgement goes to the two absolute joys of my life, my sons Emir Adam and Emir Idris, who have provided untold satisfaction, inspiration and fulfillment to me from the time that they were born to the present.

I further gratefully acknowledge the assistance of colleagues, academic staff and other faculty members as well as the support staff of the Faculty of Hotel and Tourism Management UiTM, not forgetting the university member and staffs for their encouragement and kind assistance rendered throughout my study. Thanks are also extended to all the respondents who have given their cooperation in completing the survey. I also wish to thank Geraldine Murphy in Christchurch, New Zealand who proof-read the final drafts of this thesis.

Special acknowledgement, however, goes to individuals who are such an important part of my life. They provided so many lessons to me throughout my childhood and adult life, lessons that I follow to this day. Their love, support, and encouragement are unwavering, and their distant past advice and encouragement has been recalled many times since the start of my journey to write this thesis. In such a small way, this venue allows me to accomplish this. Thus, this thesis is especially dedicated to my parents. Alhamdulillah.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
AUTHOR'S DECLARATION	ii
ABSTRACT	iii
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	iv
TABLE OF CONTENTS	v
LIST OF TABLES	xii
LIST OF FIGURES	xvi
CHAPTER ONE : INTRODUCTION
1.1 Preamble	1
1.2 Background of the Study	1
1.3 Problem Statement	6
1.4 Research Objectives	10
1.5 Research Questions	11
1.6 Conceptual Study Framework/ Model	11
1.7 Theoretical Framework	13
1.8 Research Hypotheses	14
1.8.1 The Relationship between Service Delivery Failure and Behavioural Intention	14
1.8.2 The Effect of Service Delivery Failure on Service Recovery	15
1.8.3 The Effect of Service Delivery Failure on Perceived Value	15
1.8.4 The Influence of Service Recovery on Customer Satisfaction	15
1.8.5 The Influence of Perceived Value on Customer Satisfaction	15
1.8.6 The Causal Relationship of Customer Satisfaction and Behavioural Intention	15
1.8.7 The Mediating Effect of Service Recovery on Relationship between Service Delivery Failure and Customer Satisfaction	16
1.8.8 The Mediating Effect of Perceived Value on Relationship between Service Delivery Failure and Customer Satisfaction	16

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION

1.1 PREAMBLE

This introduction chapter consists of several main sections with the first part highlighting the role of service delivery failure and recovery undertaken in various industries, particularly restaurants and how this affects customer satisfaction and their subsequent behavioural intention to revisit. This is followed by illustrating the research context and problem statement. The pertinent issues of perceived values that may have a direct impact on customer views of a particular restaurant are also discussed in this section. The objectives, research questions, the study's conceptual and theoretical framework, together with the hypotheses, are then addressed in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sections of this chapter. The succeeding sections give details on the significance of the study from both academic and practical perspectives. The final section displays the definitions of key terms and the organization of the thesis relating to all chapters is underlined.

1.2 BACKGROUND OF THE STUDY

The foodservice industry, today, is recognized as a global economic industry, with producers and consumers spread around the world (Kong & Jogaratnam, 2007). This development is obvious from the array of foodservice establishments blooming in the sub-continent including hotels, food retail, catering, health foodservice, food manufacturing and restaurants (Lewis, 2006). The foodservice industries worldwide, especially the restaurant sectors are experiencing tremendous expansion compared to other sub-sectors (Chu, 2007). The positive development of the restaurant industry globally is accounted for by several factors, such as the roles of technology, humanistic approaches, changes in consumer behaviour, quality of service, satisfaction and effective service deliveries (Matilla, 1999; Kandampully & Suhartanto, 2000; Dorsch, Grove &