Dean of Akademi Pengajian Bahasa

In the name of Allah the Most Merciful and Most Gracious.

Assalamualaikum Warahmatullahi Wabarakatuh dan Salam Sejahtera.

It gives me an immense pleasure to welcome all speakers, presenters and participants to the International Conference of Research on Language Education 2021 (i-RoLE 2021) organised by the Academy of Language Studies (APB), UiTM Melaka. While circumstances prevent a face-to-face event, we are proud to be hosting our first online conference given the new challenges of the Covid-19 pandemic that has forced us to pivot to a completely virtual one.

The theme for the two-day conference - Engaging in Change: Empowering Linguistics, Literature and Language' has been remotely set up to provide not only professionals but also novice researchers from all over the world with the opportunity to share their scholarly experiences and exchange knowledge in the different fields of languages, linguistic and literature in this increasingly complex terrain. Looking at the conference schedule, and the many wonderful and accomplished guest speakers and presenters, I am confident this conference will be a remarkable avenue of learning, networking and inspiration.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the iRoLE 2021 organising committee and those who are involved directly and indirectly in making this event a success. I hope this remarkable event will continue in the future.

I also would like to express my deepest thanks to the speakers and presenters who did their best to submit their presentation videos in due time to ease out the technicalities during the conference. I wish you all the best in your presentations and I hope that you will enjoy and benefit tremendously from the conference. We hope that your experience in this virtual conference will be a rewarding one that sparks new collaborations and areas of inquiry.

I wish all of you an exciting virtual experience and anticipate seeing all of you again at our future events.

The use of impoliteness strategies in online feedback relating to a general election in media

The spike in Computer Mediated Communication (CMC) has overspilled into online political discussions enabling the free expression of political views in various platforms. This study aims to investigate the frequency of impoliteness strategies used by netizens in their political discussions online. The study also hopes to identify, if present, the impoliteness strategies that have been more extensively used. Finally, this study aims at finding out the reasons for employing such impoliteness strategies by netizens. In order to answer these questions, a total of 150 impolite feedback responses of netizens were collected from Malaysiakini - an online news portal. The feedback responses formed the backbone of the data, for the study. This data was analysed based on the model of impoliteness by Culpepper (1996, 2005) in the field of pragmatics. The findings firstly revealed that impoliteness strategies were present and the more frequently employed impoliteness strategy was the “positive impoliteness strategy”. This, is used to damage the addressee’s positive face wants i.e., the desire to be liked and appreciated. The findings further revealed that the “bold on-record impoliteness strategy” i.e., where the Face Threatening Act (FTA) was played out directly, were seemingly less frequent. The interview data further revealed that the main reasons that contributed to the use of impoliteness was anger, more precisely, pent-up anger.

Keywords: Netizens, Impoliteness strategies, CMC, Face Threatening Act (FTA)
