MODULE OVERVIEW / INTRO

What is LMS 301 Module?

Mendeley is a free reference manager that can help students and researchers organize their research, collaborate with others online, and discover the latest research. This class would assist students and researchers at all levels to store, track and cite reference information about their research materials.

Teaching Medium

1. Online via Webex, Google Meet, Google Classroom
2. Face to Face : IT Centre

Module highlight :

Access and searching technique to:

1. Introduction to Reference Management Software
2. Introduction to Mendeley
3. Installation Guide
4. Mendeley Use
5. In-Text Citation
6. Bibliography

Duration

1 to 2 Hour(s)

INTRODUCTION TO REFERENCE MANAGEMENT SOFTWARE

WHAT IS REFERENCING

- Referencing means acknowledging someone else's work or ideas.
- It is sometimes called 'citing' or 'documenting' another person's work.
- Referencing is a basic university requirement.
- Without appropriate referencing students are in effect "stealing" the work of others - this is lead to academic fraud @ Plagiarism

CITATION – REFERENCE - BIBLIOGRAPHY

| CITATION | REFERENCE | BIBLIOGRAPHY |
|--|---|--|
| Appears within the text of your assignment and acknowledges that the words or ideas belongs to another. Author focus: According to Adams (2001), Information focus:(Adams, 2001). | Appears at the end of your assignment . This list contains ONLY the sources you cited in your assignment. | Appears at the end of your assignment . It is a list of ALL sources you used to formulate your assignment. |

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A bibliography is a list contain of all the sources you have used, whether they are directly cited or not. In a Bibliography you list all of the material you have consulted in preparing your essay whether or not you have actually cited the work.

A bibliography will contain all research materials, including books, magazines, periodicals, websites and scientific papers, which you have used to generate ideas or 'read around' a topic, but have not referred to directly in the body of the document.

This means, in addition to listing the sources you cited in-text, you also list resources that you read or referred to generate your ideas about the topic.

When citing, you need:

- ✓ WHO created the work
- ✓ WHEN it was published, created, or performed
- ✓ WHERE it was published, created, or performed
- ✓ WHAT is the format (Book, Report, play, study, proceeding)
- ✓ When using online resources, you need: The URL (Website) or Database Name, WHEN the URL (Website) or database was visited

WHEN SHOULD I DO CITATION/REFERENCE?

You reference whenever you have used a piece of information that comes from :

- Text books
- Journals
- Published papers, (e.g. conference or working paper)
- Newspapers
- Reports
- Websites
- TV/Radio interviews/Film
- Others, etc

WRITING STYLE

- ✓ APA reference list
- ✓ MLA list of works cited
- ✓ Oxford bibliographies
- ✓ Harvard reference lists
- ✓ Chicago bibliographies
- ✓ .... Many more

WRITING STYLE

APA (American Psychological Association) style is most frequently used within the social sciences, in order to cite various sources.

This style offers examples for the general format of APA research papers, in-text citations, endnotes/footnotes, and the reference page.

APA CITATION & REFERENCES

There are 2 parts:-

i. In-Text Citations (within the body of your paper).

Each in-text citation gives just enough information on a particular source to “point” the reader to the corresponding, more detailed entry on the reference list.

Example: Numerous studies in the field of total quality management (TQM) practices have indicated a positive effect of these practices on the performance of companies (Ahire et al., 1996; Adebajo and Kehoe, 1999; Kaynak, 2003; Hanson and Eriksson, 2002; Sadikoglu and Zehir, 2010; Al-Dujaili, 2013).

ii. Reference List (on the separate page at the end of your paper)

This is the list of sources you used and cited in your paper.

Example:-

- Lepist, K., Saunila, M., & Ukko, J. (2020). The impact of certification on the elements of TQM exploring the influence of company size and industry. <https://doi.org/10.1108/IJQRM-11-2020-0362>
- Zhu, M., Bonk, C. J., & Doo, M. Y. (2020). Self-directed learning in MOOCs: exploring the relationships among motivation, self-monitoring, and self-management. Educational Technology Research and Development, 0123456789. <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11423-020-09747-8>

APA STYLE COMMON “RULES”

It is important to remember that:-

- i. APA follows the Author, Year format either Adam (2012) or (Adam, 2012)
- ii. Only “ Author’s last name or surname is used. For Malay name, full name/ first name can be used
- iii. In the reference list, the cited sources are listed in alphabetical order (From A to Z)

APA STYLE COMMON “RULES”

APA Citations – Choosing the name (Always use the surname/lastname)

- David J. Beckham (2010) = Beckham (2010)
- Chuah Kee-Man (2009) = Chuah (2009)
- Jimmy Choo Kim Yong (2012) = Choo (2012)
- Nigel de Jong (2009) = de Jong (2009)
- Asmah bt. Omar (2012)
= Omar (2012) OR Asmah Omar (2012)
- Nesamalar a/p Chitavelu (1995)
= Nesamalar (1995) OR Chitavelu (1995)

The dimensions of customer preference in the foodservice industry

Authors: F. Abdullah, A. bin Abang Abdurahman, J. Hamal

Journal: Business: Theory and Practice

Year: 2013
Volume: 14
Issue: 1
Pages: 64-73

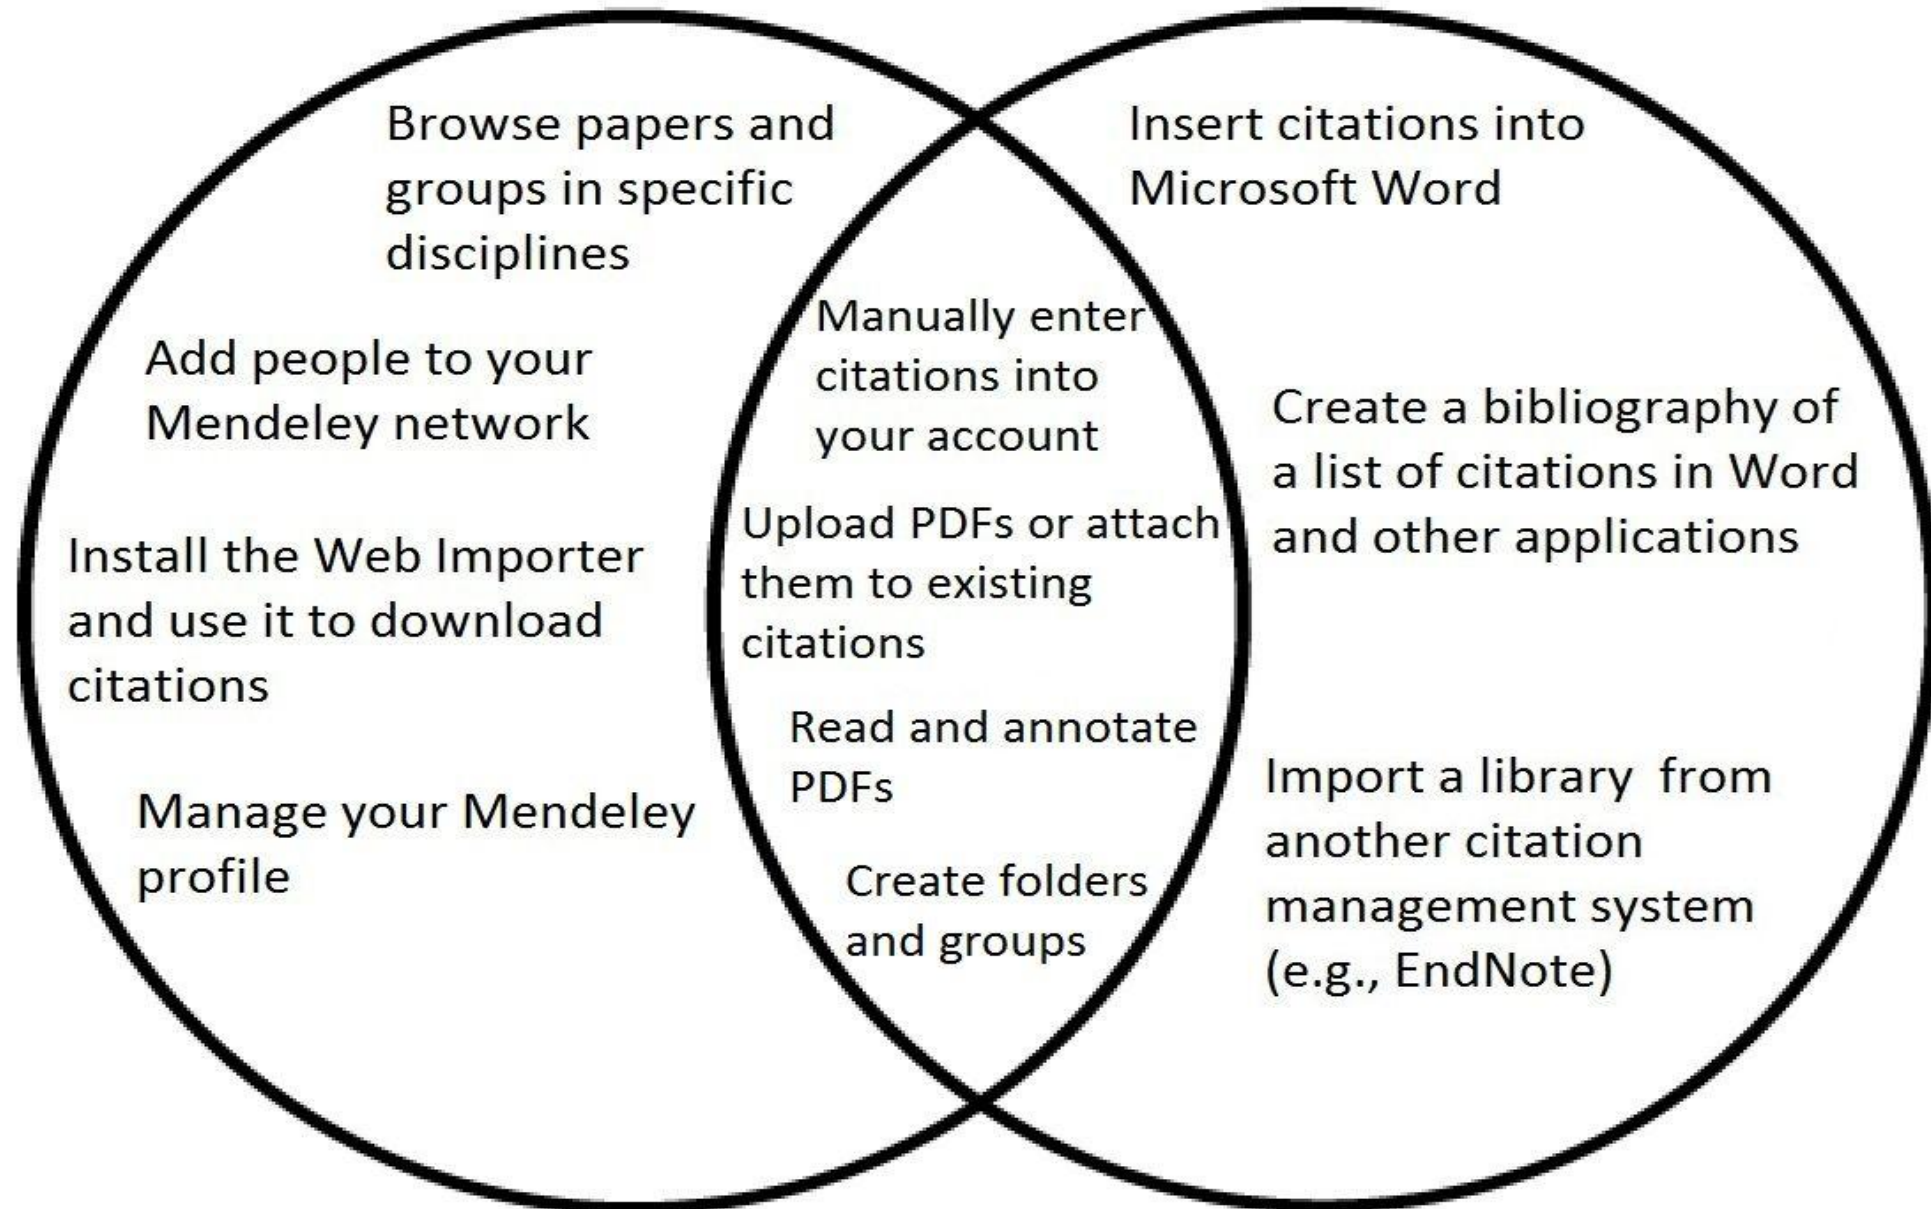

Abstract:
Today's foodservice industry management must place a high priority on understanding the growing markets resulting from rapid urbanization and rising numbers of tourists. This industry has a huge impact on the global economy but it is affected by customers' ever-changing preferences. Managers need to gain and sustain strategic advantage in this highly competitive industry, thus a local customer preference assessment is crucial. This paper presents the dimensions of customer preference in the food service industry, tested empirically for unidimensionality, reliability and validity using both exploratory and confirmatory factor analysis. A 30-item questionnaire was designed and distributed to 1000 foodservice custome...

MENDELEY WEB – ADD FILES FROM LITERATURE SEARCH

The screenshot displays the Mendeley web interface. At the top left is the Mendeley logo. On the top right, there are navigation links for 'Search', 'Library', and a user profile for 'Nurul Jasni'. A search bar in the center contains the text 'blood cancer', which is highlighted with a red box. To the right of the search bar is a blue 'Search' button. Below the search bar, it indicates '218,630 results'. There are three sorting options: 'Most relevant' (selected), 'Most recent', and 'Most cited'. On the left side, there are filters for 'YEAR' and 'DOCUMENT TYPE'. Under 'YEAR', there are radio buttons for 'Anytime (218,630)', 'Last 12 months (11,584)', 'Last 5 years (68,544)', 'Last 10 years (129,762)', and 'Custom range'. Under 'DOCUMENT TYPE', there are checkboxes for 'Journal (180,430)', 'Generic (23,306)', and 'Conference Proceedings'. The main content area shows two search results. The first result is titled 'The "vesicular intelligence" strategy of blood cancers' by Forte D., Barone M. [...] Catani L. in Genes (2021). It has 0 Citations and 7 Readers. The second result is titled 'Magnesium: The overlooked electrolyte in blood cancers?' by Gile J., Ruan G. [...] Witzig T. in Blood Reviews (2020). It has 5 Citations and 13 Readers. Both titles and parts of the abstracts are highlighted in yellow. At the bottom of each result, there are links for '+ Add to library', 'View PDF', and 'Related'. A dark blue callout box on the right side of the results area contains the text 'Get full text at publisher's page.'

ABSTRACT

Growing competition in the world determines the importance of innovation technology between countries. High-tech markets encourage the inventors to apply their inventions to commercial project. Many new trends on the world markets depend on factors that generate the ideas and their capacity to be absorbed. Development of new technologies in foodservice is considered a luxury as the sector is comprised predominantly by small and medium size businesses that may not be able to afford the... Abstract:

Today's foodservice industry management must place a high priority on understanding the growing markets resulting from rapid urbanization and rising numbers of tourists. This industry has a huge impact on the global economy but it is affected by customers' ever-changing preferences. Managers need to gain and sustain strategic advantage in this highly competitive industry, thus a local customer preference assessment is crucial. This paper presents the dimensions of customer preference in the food service industry, tested empirically for unidimensionality, reliability and validity using both exploratory and confirmatory factor analysis. A 30-item questionnaire was designed and distributed to 1000 foodservice custome...

Back to the future: progress and trends in hotel loyalty marketing
S. Tanford, S. Shoemaker, A. Dinca

Pages: 1937-1967

Abstract:
Purpose - In 1999, Shoemaker and Lewis declared customer loyalty as “the future of hospitality marketing”. This paper aims to evaluate the state of research and practice in hotel loyalty and reward programs in the subsequent 15 years to determine if the tenets set forth have occurred. The loyalty circle provides a conceptual framework within which to evaluate progress and trends in hotel loyalty marketing. Design/methodology/approach - Three approaches were used: a comprehensive review of hotel loyalty and reward program literature from 2000 to 2015, a classification and analysis of program benefits for major hotel companies and in-depth interviews with industry professionals. Findings - The literature shows a progression from process-focused research to a greater emphasis on brand relationships. Communication is neglected compared to the other loyalty circle components. Reward programs still depend largely on financial benefits but have added greater flexibility and customization of rewards. Research limitations/implications - The literature

UPGRADING OF BIOMASS BY MEANS OF TORREFACTION

(Received 7 November 1989; received for publication 18 May 1990)

Abstract—We present results on upgrading of wood and briquettes by means of torrefaction. The torrefied products showed significantly less smoking during combustion and a relatively faster rate of combustion. The weight and energy yields of torrefied wood are 66.7–83.3 and 76.5–89.6%, respectively; the corresponding values for sawdust briquettes are 76.3–93.8 and 83.1–95.3%, respectively.

INTRODUCTION

Fuelwood is often difficult to use because of its poor combustion characteristics, e.g., low heating value, variable moisture content which is often high, hygroscopic nature, smoking during combustion, etc. For domestic and a number of other applications, wood is often upgraded to charcoal. The charcoal-making process is, however, grossly inefficient, with the product containing only about 55% of the energy of the original raw material in well-managed, commercial operations and as little as 20% in traditional processes.

Torrefaction or roasting appears to be an attractive option of upgrading wood to a product which retains about 90% of its energy and can be substituted for charcoal in a variety of applications.¹ The important advantages of torrefied wood include high energy yield and hydrophobicity so that it does not regain moisture during storage.

Abstract

Purpose – This paper aims to understand employees' perceptions of human resources management functions and how these affect brand performance, and the indirect influence of human resources management functions when mediated by job satisfaction in branded hotels in China. Hotel human resources functions, specifically organizational career management, and internal branding in hotels in mainland China were examined. The mediating effect of job satisfaction on the relationship between organizational career management and internal branding on brand performance was also examined.

Design/methodology/approach – A survey of hotel supervisors and middle managers in mainland China yielded 510 valid questionnaires for data analysis. Structural equation modeling was used to empirically test the relationships between human resources management functions (organizational career management, internal branding and job satisfaction) and brand performance in four- and five-star hotels in China.

Findings – The structural equation modeling results showed strong support for the mediating effect of job satisfaction on the relationships between organizational career management, internal branding and brand performance. Interestingly, although internal branding significantly affected brand performance, organizational career management alone did not.

Research limitations/implications – The main limitation was the use of a convenience sampling method, which means respondents may not represent a sufficiently broad sample of hotel employees. Future studies are encouraged to explore internal branding and hotel career management using a probability sampling method.

Practical implications – The findings offer new insights and directions for hotel human resources managers to improve brand performance, either through promoting internal branding itself, or by enhancing organizational career management, internal branding and employees' job satisfaction to achieve brand performance.

Originality/value – This is the first empirical study to analyze hotel management employees' perceptions of the relationships between hotel human resources management, employees' job

Abstract

Explicit health care rationing or priority-setting is the use of institutional procedures for the systematic allocation of resources within health care systems. With the establishment of priority setting systems in various countries in the past two decades, research has been conducted on their principles, methods and institutional aspects. This paper draws on the sociology of science and technology to propose an uncertainty-focused conceptual model of the relationship between knowledge practises and political processes in health care rationing. Taking a case-study approach, the paper explores the public controversy about whether dementia drugs should be available on the UK National Health Service. It shows how three aspects of the controversy – loose institutional

Secondary referencing

- Secondary referencing involves referring to a document which you have not seen, but which has been used and cited by someone else. This is not generally good academic practice. You should make an effort to track down the original work and reference that.
- Citation of an article implies that you have personally read the cited work. If you quote from a work that has been mentioned in something else you have read, but you have not read the original source, then you must make it a secondary reference. It is important to make it clear that you have not read the original work.
- Complete reference to the original journal article, book or other item.
