ABSTRACT

Malaysia is one of the countries that have implemented the concept of Islamic Finance in its banking industry. The increasing value of the industry has made Malaysia one of the most significant hubs in dealing with Islamic finance. The effort and competition among Islamic banks players raises the issues of ability small player to survive. This study aims at the determinants of foreign Islamic bank performance in Malaysia for 7 years particularly in period of 2010 until 2016. The sample of 5 foreign Islamic bank was collected to understand the Islamic bank performance. Result for this study was analysed by using multiple regression. The bank need to minimize its liquidity risk, credit risk, and leverage to increase its own bank performance.
