ABSTRACT

THE INFLUENCE OF LEADERSHIP, COMMUNICATION, AND TRAINING ON RISK MANAGEMENT AWARENESS

BY

SITI FARHANI BINTI MAT HUSIN

This study examines the influence of leadership, communication, and training on risk management awareness. In this study, it determines the most significant elements that contribute to risk management awareness. There are 100 questionnaires distributed to the respondents. Data collected for use in this research includes frequency analysis, descriptive statistics, reliability analysis, Pearson Correlation, and multiple linear regressions. In this research, Pearson Correlation has shown that leadership, communication, and training have a positive relationship with risk management awareness. However, multiple linear regression is used to predict the impact of independent variables on the dependent variable. In other words, it is to find out which one of leadership, communication, and training is the best predictor and most influential to risk management awareness. In conclusion, communication is the most significant and most dominant in this research.
