ABSTRACT

Waqf creates great benefits not only for the endower but also for the whole society. Endowment of waqf is generally known in terms of property but little attention given to endowment of cash waqf. This paper aim to investigate the attitude towards participation in cash waqf among muslim staff in UTM (Skudai). The findings of this paper are based on 211 samples. Descriptive analysis, exploratory factor analysis and regression analysis are used to analyse the data. The results indicate that individual religiosity, trust in awqaf institutions and convenience to endow are antecedents of Muslim attitude towards participation in cash waqf, which consequently leads to individual intention to participate in the practice. The study provides a useful source of information to relate parties for instance the waqf institution and Islamic regulatory body in executing effective strategy to promote cash waqf as well as reinforcement of systematic collection procedures that can benefit the community.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the name of Allah, the Most Merciful and the Most Gracious. Allhamdulillah, all praises to Allah, for giving me opportunity, strength and simplify for me in completing my final year task through His Blessings.

I am very grateful that I have completed my final year project by the assistance of various authorities. Therefore, I would like to express my thankful and appreciation to these authorities.

First and foremost, I would like to acknowledge my dear advisor, Miss Nor Haliza binti Hamzah for countless effort and guidance throughout the step and process to helping me in completing this study. Without her lesson, this study would not have come to its conclusion and not to be too much impact on me and others. My gratitude also goes to my coordinator, Madam Zuraidah binti Sipon, for continues effort to conduct and giving the information, procedure and guidance during the internship and the research.

Besides, I would also like to thanks to all my friends and family for giving the huge support, cooperation and motivation for me in completing this research study. They also share their time and knowledge to help me in finishing this research successfully. Hopefully, this study will not only beneficial for me in finishing my research but also for future researchers, financial institutions and government itself. Not to forget to all those who participate in this research, I thank you and may God bless you abundantly.
