HOMETUTORINK: A MOBILE APPLICATION FOR HOME-TUTORING SERVICES IN MALAYSIA

Muhammad Asraf Abdul Rahim

In Malaysia, the trends of parents on having their children on the best results of academic reputation is still a common thing and some of them willing to pay a certain large amount of money on home-tutoring. In fact, home-tutoring contributed a lot to some students who unable to adapt the flow of how the teachers in the school in practicing their education activities. However, these parents were struggling to find the best and suitable home-tutor in helping their children to fix the weaknesses on one or several subjects. Besides of that, a face-paced income generated mobile application services technology such as GrabCar, GrabFood, MyCar, MyPasar and some few others has been well-known of its existence among Malaysian since its potential in creating opportunity for the communities to generate side-income. Therefore, the aim of this project is to create a mobile application that provide a place where anyone can be a tutor (must be qualified to a certain level) and parents are free to change or remain on the selected tutor.
