PREFACE

Alhamdulillah a class project of poetry writing with two groups of optimistic students have been realized. A beautiful compilation of poems by students from both classes have been produced at the end of the semester. As a class lecturer, I am very proud of the students' enthusiasm in the project. I encouraged my learners to be creative in expressing their thoughts and feelings with words. I included creative writing in my language teaching practices due to several reason which is firstly creative writing aids language development at the level of grammar, vocabulary, and discourse and secondly creative writing fosters 'playfulness', which encourages learners to play creatively with the language, to explore the language and discover things not only about the language but about themselves. 'writing poetry, which involves the full personality of the individual, is first and foremost, a 'playful' activity'. Once students explore poetic language, they can gain useful ideas for creative writing. In this respect, writing poetry can be a significant stimulation for students' creativity.

In the class project, students write poems using the poetry prompts given. The activities with poetry prompts develop learner's independence and confidence to read aloud, perform, write, and experiment with language. Besides the benefits that are meaningful on a more personal level such as emotional and intellectual, poetry prompts assist learners to practice for strengthening one's writing skills excellently. Through poetry writing, one's gain command of language, cultivate a robust and expressive vocabulary, master literary devices, and learn to work in imagery.

Writing is a therapeutic process that can turn a bad day into a good one. When a poem is written, it results in a sense of accomplishment and pride which in turn increases self-confidence. I am glad to say that students who participated in the project, had benefit from the activities with poetry prompts because it adds a new and unexpected dimension to their studies.

I Don't Know What to Write

Written By Wan Muhammad Aiman

*I don't know what to write, there's nothing help in my sight, I look in some internet site,
but no site feels right,
first the day is bright, but suddenly it becomes night, i tried to walk outside, then go back inside.*

*it feels hard to think,
i took some drink,
i waste my ink,
my eyes blink,
my body stink,
stay up till morning,
i found nothing,
and I ended up sleeping, without writing anything.*
