In the name of Allah the Most Merciful and Most Gracious.

Assalamualaikum Warahmatullahi Wabarakatuh dan Salam Sejahtera.

It gives me an immense pleasure to welcome all speakers, presenters and participants to the International Conference of Research on Language Education 2021 (i-RoLE 2021) organised by the Academy of Language Studies (APB), UiTM Melaka. While circumstances prevent a face-to-face event, we are proud to be hosting our first online conference given the new challenges of the Covid-19 pandemic that has forced us to pivot to a completely virtual one.

The theme for the two-day conference - Engaging in Change: Empowering Linguistics, Literature and Language’ has been remotely set up to provide not only professionals but also novice researchers from all over the world with the opportunity to share their scholarly experiences and exchange knowledge in the different fields of languages, linguistic and literature in this increasingly complex terrain. Looking at the conference schedule, and the many wonderful and accomplished guest speakers and presenters, I am confident this conference will be a remarkable avenue of learning, networking and inspiration.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the iRoLE 2021 organising committee and those who are involved directly and indirectly in making this event a success. I hope this remarkable event will continue in the future.

I also would like to express my deepest thanks to the speakers and presenters who did their best to submit their presentation videos in due time to ease out the technicalities during the conference. I wish you all the best in your presentations and I hope that you will enjoy and benefit tremendously from the conference. We hope that your experience in this virtual conference will be a rewarding one that sparks new collaborations and areas of inquiry.

I wish all of you an exciting virtual experience and anticipate seeing all of you again at our future events.

Challenges and Solutions To Implementing Digital Game-Based Language Learning During The Covid-19 Pandemic

nadya@utar.edu.my

COVID-19 thrust educators and students into a sudden shift to online teaching and learning, resulting in an absence of physical interaction between the lecturers and students, leading to increased potential for poor engagement among learners. Prior to the pandemic, higher education institutions had begun incorporating games and simulations to prepare future professionals for the working world, as current research indicates that games, especially simulation games promote greater engagement in the learning process. However, although GBLL has been successfully implemented in classrooms globally, it is still relatively new in Malaysia, underscoring a paucity of research on local higher educational institutions and GBLL. This exploratory qualitative research investigates the challenges and solutions for implementing digital GBLL in Malaysia during the COVID-19 pandemic. Using The SIMS 4 “Get to Work” expansion pack, 10 undergraduate students from a local private university utilized the game during an English for Specific Purposes (ESP) course to learn business vocabulary incidentally as they set up a virtual business, hire staff, set profit margins as well as select advertising channels. Findings revealed that while GBLL was useful for incidental vocabulary learning, the main challenges to its successful implementation lay in the perception and attitudes of lecturers and students, as well as facilitating conditions such as technological readiness and availability of equipment. Possible solutions include introducing DGBLL to ESP courses in institutions of higher learning to generate more awareness of its uses and potential and providing more technological and infrastructural support.
